National Science Foundation

Offender Registration: Examination of Intended and Unintended Effects on Juvenile Offenders

The purpose of this examination of archival juvenile justice data is to examine whether registration and notification policies impacted rates of juvenile sexual offending in South Carolina. Data across a 12 year time period will be examined for trends in rates of arrest for rape and other sexual crimes. This time period includes years in which comprehensive registration and (later) notification (via Internet) policies were put into practice.

Effectiveness Trial: MST with Juvenile Sexual Offenders

The purpose of this randomized clinical trial is to evaluate treatment effects on youth criminal activity, mental health functioning, and alcohol and drug use, as well as family relations, peer relations, and school attendance. The study also tracks adolescent juvenile justice involvement, mental health and substance abuse service utilization, and out-of-home placements. Comparisons will be conducted for youth randomly assigned to receive Multisystemic Therapy versus youths randomly assigned to usual services (i.e., residential or community based sex offender-specific treatment).
