

Fire Museum Boil

www.musc.edu/srappa2008

Pass through the massive mahogany firehouse doors into the 25,000 square foot facility and step back in time. Showcasing antique American LaFrance fire engines and offering interactive exhibits, the fire museum is a unique backdrop for a traditional "Low Country Boil". Learn how fire fighting has progressed over the years while supping on the one-pot wonder that is a Low Country Boil. A hearty seafood dish full of shrimp, sausage, potatoes, and cob corn will get you in the mood for experiencing all that Charleston, the capitol of the South Carolina Low Country, has to offer.

Saturday, October 25, 2008

The North Charleston and America LaFrance Fire Museum and Educational Center is located just minutes from the North Charleston Convention Center. To learn more, go to www.legacyofheroes.org.

SRAPPA 2008

